

WHERE IT ALL ENDED

My heart was beating so fast that I thought it would tear from my chest;
The colour in my body had been drained and I was trembling violently;
Gunfire lit up the starless sky;
More unconscious bodies flopped onto the ground like
fish out of water;
I heard a deafening, earsplitting and high pitched scream;
After I looked around I realised that it had come from me;
Blood oozed out of the dying soldiers that were sprawled
across the gruesome grass;
I closed my eyes and tried to force the image out of my head but it only made it worse;
In all of a sudden I heard a thunderous gunshot;
I crumpled to the floor and a single tear ran down my dirt-streaked face;
I was an elegant eagle that was soaring into the unknown;
I took one last shaky breath, closed my eyes and finally I let it take me.
